RUSSIA'S REGIONS: NEW AREAS FOR GROWTH INVESTMENT IN THE REAL ECONOMY

Attracting investment into the real economy is a top priority for Russia's regions. Developing high-tech manufacturing facilities, creating new jobs, and improving infrastructure all help to boost a region's competitiveness.

In recent years, several institutions and measures have been introduced to support industrial development in Russia. Such initiatives aim to attract financing, identify and apply technological solutions, and offer assistance in finding new domestic and foreign markets.

How can we help businesses in Russia's regions to understand global trends and integrate into the manufacturing chains of leading international companies? What opportunities is the state providing to encourage the creation of new enterprises? What more can be done to attract investment into the real economy?
